Lockerbie Memorial Church Museum

May 2025: A group of community-minded Locardians, including Vicky Jardine-Paterson and Graham & Nan Rew, joined Victoria Cummock to rescue the iconic Dryfesdale Church building after years of significant water ingress through its 125-year-old leaded roofs. Founding supporters include the Lord Lieutenant of Dumfries Fiona Armstrong; PA103LLF Board Members Carisa Harris Adamson & Jodi Flowers; U.K. Dev. Manager John Palser; and Lockerbie Historian George Trudt.

Fall-Winter 2025: Utilising local RIAS conservation architects Doug Bodell and Andrew Clark of RP&P, building surveys were initiated which identified the most urgent areas demanding immediate interventions to help avoid further deterioration and partial collapse of one of Lockerbie's most revered and majestic sites. Dozens of licensed local tradespeople were employed for a massive controlled down taking of the entire south side of the church, including the ground floor sanctuary and upper balcony ceilings, floors, walls and rotted timbers, followed by the introduction of metal bracing beams to stabilise the areas. The vestry and main interior staircase, spanning four storeys to the bell tower and steeple, were similarly treated. Costs exceeded £400K in stabilization and rehabilitation.

This beautiful historic B-listed Scottish Baronial building is slated to become the Lockerbie Memorial Church Museum. The building will reopen in stages for community use, including commemorative and celebratory services, contemplation, concerts, cultural events and educational programmes. Works will continue in phases:

2026: Phase 1 External works including entire roof replacement, complete repointing and repair of sandstone walls, refurbishment of stained and leaded glass windows, and the rehabilitation of the two church bells. Approved cost: £1.3M

Spring-Winter 2026: Search for and appointment of heritage museum interior design & development firm.

2027: Phase 2 Interior works involving upgrading building with modern interior structural supports and sustainable systems to bring site into compliance with electrical, mechanical, heat, water, fire detection and accessibility standards, including wheelchair access ramps, lifts and toilets. Estimated cost: £1.5M

2027-2028: Phase 3 Build out museum galleries with state-of-the-art exhibitions and installations. Estimated cost: £1.7M

Summer 2028: LCMC Grand Opening

Dryfesdale Church History

The Dryfesdale Parish Church has been an integral part of the Lockerbie community for centuries. Its history goes back to 1116 in Royal documents. Later documents of the Inquisition of King David indicate that it was the property of the episcopate of Glasgow.

1170–1186 Dryfesdale Church is confirmed as a Roman Catholic episcopate of Glasgow by the Bulls of Pope Alexander, Pope Lucius, and Pope Urban. Built on the shore of the Dryfe river, the early structure likely consisted of a plain four wall building with an altar, wooden cross and bell. The church was dedicated to St. Cuthbert. Burial ground was eventually added.

1670 & 1757 Church was swept away by the Dryfe river flooding and rebuilt on higher ground at Kirkhill, only to be swept away again by the river.

1758 Laird of Lockerbie grants the Presbytery the current High Street site. A barn style whitewashed church is built.

1808–1830 Congregation grew so much that the church was expanded twice, allowing for an additional 500 seats.

1896 Church demolished to make way for a new church designed by architect Frank J. C. Carruthers. The foundation stone of the fourth Dryfesdale Church was laid on 11th July. The cost of the new structure was £4,575, paid for by its congregation, the Baird Trust and other area congregations. After 125 years the Dryfesdale Church building remains one of Lockerbie's most revered iconic community structures.

Dryfesdale Church History

1905 A spectacular church organ was added by Forster and Andrews of Hull. For decades Dryfesdale Church thrived as a Church of Scotland and was one of Lockerbie's significant ecclesiastical seats.

1973 Dryfesdale & Trinity Church parishes were combined due to reduction of parishioners.

1989 Official Memorial Service. On 4th January, dignitaries joined to pay their respects with Lockerbie locals and relatives of the victims of the Pan Am flight 103 bombing, which killed 11 Lockerbie residents. Over 700 people attended with a massive overflow crowd extending down High Street.

2020 Dryfesdale & Trinity Church parishioner numbers decline to under 100.

2022 Church Services moved across the road to Dryfesdale Church Hall. Church building closed due to health and safety reasons. Building continues to fall into disrepair.

2025 After years of significant water ingress through the church's flat lead roofs, our immediate stabilisation and rehabilitation interventions enabled the church to reopen for the 37th anniversary commemorative service, A Community Celebration of Gratitude & Remembrance.

Lockerbie Memorial Church Museum

A full restoration of the pulpit, organ, central and north sanctuary areas will make available spaces for appropriate community use such as celebratory and commemorative services, cultural events, contemplation and interactive learning programmes. An addition of a small library to the north sanctuary of primary source documents with access to multinational primary source digital archives.

The Memorial Gallery

Repair and restore the entire south sanctuary and upper balcony ceilings, walls, windows and floors.

The ground floor south sanctuary will be converted into a dedicated Memorial Gallery consolidating the World War I & World War II Memorial Shrine Chapel, the six existing registered Imperial War Museum Memorials and other commemorative memorials. In order to commemorate our locals and those killed in the deadliest terrorist attack in U.K. history, the Pan Am 103 Lockerbie Victims Living Memorial will take its proper place within the church..

Upper Floor Museum Galleries

The Pivotal Moment in History Gallery will consist of numerous 21 December 1988 related exhibitions. The Attack Exhibition will feature an interactive timeline to teach about the events surrounding the terrorist bombing of Pan American flight 103 and its aftermath. The bombing remains the deadliest terrorist attack in U.K. history and was the deadliest attack against the U.S. until the attacks of 11 September 2001. It created the largest crime scene in history at over 845 square miles. The Justice & Accountability Exhibition will tell the story of the largest ever global criminal investigation, which has spanned 37 years and remains an active enquiry with ongoing Criminal Court proceedings in U.S. courts in Washington, DC.

The Legacy Story Gallery will tell the extraordinary and inspirational stories of all impacted by the attack. The Exhibition “Lockerbie—the Town that Taught the World a Lesson in Humanity” will focus on the townspeople of Lockerbie and acknowledge their incredible compassion and generosity. The Wall of Honour Exhibition will pay homage to the thousands of first responders and volunteers whose heroic actions during the unprecedented recovery operations remain an inspiration. Included will be first-hand accounts of ordinary people united by tragedy which will provide impactful visitor learning experiences through inspiring true stories of hope, loss, sacrifice, resilience and advocacy.

The Lockerbie Heritage Gallery exhibition space will advance the rich local heritage, history, culture and traditions. Included will be artifacts from the area’s pre-history and archaeology: excavations from the Neolithic period between 3950-3700 BC; excavations of a Bronze Age cemetery from 2140-1690 BC; digs at Torwood Ancient Roman encampment and Hadrian’s Wall beginning in 70 AD. Historical interactive exhibitions of Viking influence and fortresses from around 800-1050 AD and of sites that indicate a human presence in Lockerbie for at least 6000 years will be included. Other multimedia exhibitions will highlight the town’s residents, architecture and exquisite countryside through the ages. These exhibitions will help visitors understand the relevance of Lockerbie’s rich history to contemporary society.
